Deciding between 22k and 44k: 44k and 22k refer to the sample rate of the source sound files, which SmartSound uses. The higher the samples rate, the better the sound quality. Many people producing videotapes prefer the 44k sound. 22k is more than adequate for multimedia type applications.

SmartSound® Sonicfire Pro 4: The flagship product in the SmartSound line, Sonicfire Pro 4 is the first-ever music solution with “Mood Mapping” for dynamically building fully composed music scores that are perfectly fit to the changing moods of any production. Built with SmartSound’s patented technology, Sonicfire Pro gives visual storytellers unprecedented power to deliver professional music scores right from the video editing workstation. With a new multi-track mixing interface and added support for the latest SmartSound Multi-Layer Music, editors can orchestrate sophisticated music tracks that would otherwise require a professional music editor or composer.

SmartSound Quicktracks for Premiere Pro: A specially designed product that integrates directly with Adobe Premiere Pro and Premiere Elements. Premiere Pro users can access this technology inside Premiere to easily add professional-grade custom length soundtracks to all of their digital video projects. The plug-in includes the SmartSound Elements music compilation with 23 great pieces of royalty-free music to get you started.
